Request for Proposals: Government relations and communications support for Wellcome Trust in Brussels and France

1. RFP Background & Objectives

Wellcome, a global charitable foundation focused on climate and health, infectious disease, mental health and discovery research is looking for agency support to build the foundations for and reinforce its government relations and communications work in Brussels, Germany, Italy and France. We are open to proposals to cover single or all markets.

2. About Wellcome Trust

Wellcome is a global charitable foundation established in 1936. Through our work we support science to solve the urgent health challenges facing everyone.

We support curiosity-driven research, and we’re taking on three of the biggest health challenges facing humanity – climate change, infectious disease and mental health.

With a £38.2 billion investment portfolio, we give researchers the time and resources they need to make breakthroughs.

We also work with policy makers, run advocacy campaigns, and form partnerships with other organisations to ensure everyone, everywhere benefits from advances in health science.

The Government Relations and Strategic Partnerships (GRSP) team

Wellcome’s GRSP team is a new function within Wellcome, centralising the management of our relationships with governments in Europe and globally as well as with partner/prospective partner organisations. The European government relations team is a sub team within GRSP, which coordinates Wellcome’s relationships with the EU institutions, and the governments of France, Germany, Italy and Norway. In some instances, such as Germany, our relationships are well established; in other markets such as Norway and Italy we are in a nascent phase of our engagement. Each market has its own objectives and level of ambition, but the team work to ensure join up and synergy across the Europe function as a whole.

As an organisation, we are committed to embedding diversity and inclusion principles into how we work.

Wellcome’s work in Brussels

Wellcome has had a presence in Brussels for some time and has established relationships across the EU institutions. Brussels is now a priority market for Wellcome’s government relations work; the EU institutions will be a crucial lever for delivering on Wellcome’s ambition across climate and health and infectious disease in particular. We are keen to ensure we are capitalising on the EU’s role both within global fora such as the G7, and as driver of policy/legislative change across its member states.

In the mid-term, our ambition for Brussels as a market is to be a recognisable and sought-after policy brand for global health, with enduring relationships across the institutions.

The short-term, the focus of our work in Brussels is the following:
• Repositioning our organisation around Wellcome’s challenge areas, in particular climate and health and infectious disease. This involves establishing new /consolidating existing relationships across all levels in relevant European Commission DGs and the European Parliament, as well as broader policy profile building, like work with media and parliamentary briefings, for example.
• Working to ensure the EU institutions consolidate their role as champions for global health, by informing their work on issues we care about with evidence based, actionable policy calls. Recent examples include the EU’s global health strategy, the EU’s position to the Financial Intermediary Fund, and the UK’s ongoing association to Horizon Europe.
• Seeking to understand and inform the EU’s presence at global events such as the United Nations General Assembly, Gastein Health Forum, World Health Summit, COP, Davos.

We have recently commissioned a perception audit of Wellcome in Brussels and are expecting the results of this to be delivered in September. We will use these insights to grow our presence and adjust our approach as needed.

Wellcome’s work in Germany

Wellcome has opened its first oversees office in Berlin in 2018 and established very strong working relationships with a broad range of stakeholders from government and parliament to think tanks, academic institutions, international organizations with a presence in Berlin as well as other philanthropic organizations. Germany is one of Wellcome’s key partners across our three challenge areas, infectious diseases, climate and health, and mental health and we have established ourselves as a key thought partner and broker in the German global health community. While Germany remains a priority market for Wellcome’s government relations capacity constraints will mean we reduce the breadth of our engagement in favour of other European markets. It will thus be crucial we identify and leverage key opportunities in our future engagement.

The short-term, the focus of our work in Germany is the following:

• Repositioning our organisation around Wellcome’s challenge areas, in particular climate and health. This involves establishing new /consolidating existing relationships across key ministries and within the German government, as well as broader policy profile building, like work with media and parliamentary briefings, for example.
• Working to ensure Global Health remains high on Germany’s agenda across all ministries in a post-pandemic world and Germany continues to play a leadership role in global health, contributing to and shaping key global health initiatives.

We have recently commissioned a perception audit of Wellcome in Germany and are expecting the results of this to be delivered in September. We will use these insights to grow our presence and adjust our approach as needed.

Wellcome’s work in France

Wellcome has had ad hoc engagement in France over the last 18 months. Like Brussels, France, and Germany has been identified as a key market for delivering on Wellcome’s ambition across climate and health and infectious disease in particular. We are keen to capitalise on France’s role as a champion for global health both within global fora and domestically.

In the mid-term, our ambition for France is to have an established set of salient partners within government and across the policy/global health ecosystem, and in particular global health research and development, and to be seen as an important/relevant player by our key audiences on the issues we care about.

In the short term, the focus of our work in France is the following:

- Understanding the agenda of the new government and its ambitions around global health, in particular research & development.
- Consolidating and growing our relationships with key targets in government and within the administration.
- Continuing to understand the landscape, build relationships and grow partnerships across the French global health/policy ecosystem, in particular global health research & development.
- Grow our understanding of the media landscape in France, in the understanding that the media is an important tool for policy influencing.

Wellcome’s work in Italy

Wellcome has had very limited engagement in Italy over the past years. However, as one of Wellcome’s key markets, we are keen to develop our engagement with key stakeholders to support our work across the challenge areas climate and health and infectious disease in particular. We are keen to build on our good working relationship during the G20 and engage more broadly during the upcoming Italy’s upcoming G7 presidency in 2024.

In the mid-term, our ambition for Italy is to have an established set of salient partners within government and across the policy/global health ecosystem and to be seen as an important/relevant player by our key audiences on the issues we care about.

In the short term, the focus of our work in Italy is the following:

- Understanding the agenda of the new government and its ambitions around global health, in particular research & development.
- Consolidating and growing our relationships with key targets in government and within the administration
- Continuing to understand the landscape, build relationships and grow partnerships across the Italian global health/policy ecosystem, in particular global health research & development.
- Grow our understanding of the media landscape in Italy, in the understanding that the media is an important tool for policy influencing.
