Request for Proposals: Assistance Developing a Mechanism for Monitoring Risks and Opportunities of a Regulatory, Ethical and Societal Nature Relevant for Wellcome’s Discovery Research Portfolio

1. RFP Background

Science is essential to solving the world's health challenges. This is why supporting bold & creative research has remained at the core of Wellcome's mission since 1936.

Wellcome is spending more money than ever before supporting people and places to undertake curiosity driven research. Our Discovery Research Portfolio is global and diverse, with,

- around 1900 active awards worth £4.4bn ranging from individual awards to funding for networks, institutes and research infrastructure;
- major investments in areas such as genetics and genomics; cell biology development and physiology; brain and behavioural sciences; molecular mechanisms; immune system in health and disease; pathogen, biology and disease transmission; population and public health; and social sciences and the humanities.

In the run up to 2030, Wellcome is committed to spend £16bn on our entire research programmes portfolio, from Discovery Research, to Mental Health, Climate and Health and Infectious Diseases.

By focusing its support for Discovery Research, Wellcome wants to encourage global researchers to be ambitious, take on difficult problems, and adopt creative and innovative approaches to push the boundaries of our understanding of life, health and wellbeing. We are also committed to embedding our beliefs and values across our work, with various activities to support ethical, open, and engaged research that reflects stakeholder interests.

In addition to funding individual research programmes, we are focusing on deepening engagement with research communities, on strengthening partnerships and linkages with current and new investments and on scoping new areas for investments.

2. RFP Specification

However, new scientific approaches and breakthroughs may also challenge the status quo in ways that have implications well beyond the scope of the research itself. For example, new scientific pathways and knowledge may push against the boundaries of existing regulatory and policy frameworks, challenge accepted social norms, or raise ethical questions about appropriate applications of new techniques or translation of findings.

Against a background of accelerating scientific breakthroughs and rapidly shifting public perception, it is increasingly important for Wellcome to be able to scan for, identify and track evolving policy and socially relevant considerations associated with Wellcome’s Discovery Research portfolio as effectively as possible.

To this end, we are looking for a supplier to support us with the development of a mechanism that leverages various data sources and inputs, to help us efficiently monitor risks and opportunities of a regulatory, ethical and societal nature that may intersect with the transformative science we seek to support.
Overall we need a monitoring mechanism that allows us to:

- Systematically and continuously assess areas of research that are being proposed, scoped, and/or funded to surface novel issues that may challenge existing regulatory, legal, and policy frameworks; social or ethical norms; or have wider societal and cultural impacts;
- Keep up with relevant changes to the regulatory, ethical and societal landscape;
- Harness our global networks of researchers, advisors, affected communities and any other relevant activity or investment, particularly those in the research ethics space, to inform our understanding and approach on research developments and share back relevant findings.

We believe this involves:

- Understanding Wellcome’s information sources – Wellcome interacts with discovery researchers and other relevant stakeholders in many different ways. For example, Wellcome processes thousands of grant applications from around the world each year, with the guidance of our independent advisory panels. Wellcome staff have access to detailed information through the stewardship of research grants and have regular interactions with both individual grant holders and some of the world leading institutes we support. However, this information is often spread across different databases, sources, and teams at the organisation. Mapping and understanding our existing information sources, tools, and touch points would maximise efficiency and support a monitoring framework suitable to the sources of information we routinely collect. This may also offer novel ways of collecting and harvesting relevant information to feed into an ongoing monitoring mechanism, as well as enable us to share relevant findings back with our networks;

- Learning from others - Reviewing existing approaches and monitoring tools in use by organisations working in the field of emerging technologies (i.e. governments and other regulatory bodies, research funders, research think-tanks, academic and research communities, etc). These may include state-of-the-art tools such as GESDA’s breakthrough radar, organisational horizon scanning functions such as the UK Government Office for Science Future’s Programme and lighter touch mechanisms and processes in use by other organisations;

- Developing proposal(s) for a suitable mechanism – on the basis of the information collected in previous phases, suppliers will be expected to make proposals for possible measures to be adopted as part of a monitoring mechanisms to be implemented in 2024/25. In doing so, suppliers will need to work collaboratively with relevant teams at Wellcome to fine tune options in line with organisational requirements as well as identifying and exploring solutions to technical and other barriers to the implementation of the different options;

- Piloting/testing some/all aspects of proposed measures - these may entail testing level of appetite of members of our research networks to work with us to identify any future legal, ethical or societal implications; piloting new approaches for collecting information from our community of discovery researchers; assessing feasibility and practicalities of the implementation of technical nature of certain measures, etc.
Deliverables:

- Progress reports to be submitted regularly to lead sponsor for this work at Wellcome;
- Workshops and other events of a consultative nature as needed, as well as minutes and materials prepared for these;
- A final report outlining the findings of this exercise, including recommendations for Wellcome on how to integrate such monitoring mechanism into its operations. This is to be completed by the end of July 2024.

This section sets out the specification of services for this RFP exercise. Suppliers should use this section to fully understand Wellcome’s requirements and to inform their response.

Wellcome will be guided by the supplier as to what is a reasonable budget for this activity as we do not want limit ambition or innovation.

4. Response Format

The following headers support the timetable by providing further detail of the key steps.

Expression of Interest and Supplier Q&A

Suppliers are asked to submit a short expression of interest by e-mail to the Wellcome contact in accordance with the RFP timetable, which should contain the following information:

- Ask any questions you have relating to this RFP
- Confirming whether you are submitting a proposal as a registered company or an individual
- If an organisation please provide registered name, address, and registration number
- A non-binding cost estimate as a single figure in GBP
• Outlining relevant subject matter knowledge and previous expertise in working with organisations to develop future-looking/horizon scanning or setting up similar monitoring mechanism and/or functions

Prior to the submission of your full proposal to the RFP, Suppliers are provided the opportunity to submit any questions they have about the exercise and the activity. All questions will be collated, anonymised, answered and returned to all Suppliers who have submitted an expression of interest in the RFP process. Please make sure you ask all questions at this stage. Once Wellcome have responded to all questions if you have any additional questions after this deadline these will not be answered to ensure that this is a fair and equitable process.

Submitting an EOI is not a binding commitment to submit a full proposal should your organisational priorities change, you will not then be penalised for future opportunities.

Please note, if we have an overwhelming response, we may choose to use this EOI stage as a selective phase, this is at Wellcome’s discretion.

If, within the proposed outputs of this RFP exercise, specific adjustments are required by you or your team which incur additional cost then outline them clearly within your commercial response. Wellcome is committed to evaluating all proposals fairly and will ensure any proposed adjustment costs sit outside the commercial evaluation.
